

Timothy R.
Tomlinson,

Associate Director emeritus of the Morris Arboretum of the University of Pennsylvania, has considerable experience in the field of history.
He holds an A.M.

in American Social History from Boston University and was a John Hay Fellow in history and the Humanities at Harvard University. He is a Fellow emeritus of the Social Science Education Consortium and the Mexican Academy of Traditional Medicine and Folklore, which awarded him the Martin de la Cruz Medal.

Tomlinson currently serves on the boards of Historic Elsay Foundation and the Chautauqua Historical Society. He is the editor and principal writer for the Society's Newsletter. Tomlinson has also served four terms on the board of New Piasa Chautauqua. He and his wife, Rose, have been Chautauquans since 1969.

Tomlinson is active in the Chautauqua Network and lectures often on Chautauqua history. He is working currently on a scholarly article on Dr. Benjamin St. James Fry, one of the Western Chautauqua founders.